Delight her.
Introduce her to the wonderful world of doll collecting Franklin Heirloom Dolls presents

GRETEL

BY CAROL LAWSON

Crafted of fine bisque porcelain and hand-painted with loving care. Just $60.

Every woman treasures her first collector doll...

It's her key to a whole new world of pleasure... a prized possession to cherish through the years. Not just for its delicate beauty and enchanting costume, but for the wonderful memories it brings.

The beguiling little beauty at your right is just such a doll.

Her name is Gretel. She's a fairy tale doll, of course... recalling the happiness of childhood as she delights the eye with her old-fashioned charm. And she's an original. By Carol Lawson, whose vivid and delightfully imaginative style has made her one of Europe's most sought-after artists.

Now this gifted artist has turned her wonderful talent to a new medium—costume dolls. And the result is a completely enchanting doll: Gretel. The resourceful little heroine from The Brothers Grimm's universally beloved fairy tale.

Inspired by the delightful story-book dolls of the 19th century, Carol Lawson's Gretel has been handcrafted with all the charm and care of an age gone by. Her bisque porcelain head, hands and feet have been sculptured in meticulous detail, and her lovely face painted by hand.

And like those dolls of yesteryear, Gretel's costume has been designed just for her. With all the special little touches one would expect from a Carol Lawson creation. From the embroidered ribbons on her pinafore to the matching pompons on her shoes and beret.

*An exclusive issue
at a most attractive price*

Gretel is available exclusively from Franklin Heirloom Dolls, and only by direct application. The price for this delightful imported doll is just $60— which may be paid in convenient monthly installments. In addition, a stand will be provided on which to display the doll at no additional charge.

Carol Lawson's 'Gretel.' The perfect beginning to a wonderful collection... for yourself or for a special lady of any age.

Doll shown much reduced. Full size is approximately 12" in height.

Letters AND COMMENTS

READING FOR THE LOVE OF IT

I appreciated the "Reading for the Love of It" article that appeared in your December-January issue of The Disney Channel Magazine. I would also like to suggest a very good book I've found, Honey for a Child's Heart by Gladys Hunt. It's very informative on choosing wholesome, quality books for your child's development.

Thank you for stressing the importance of reading!

Mrs. Jan Mullavy

DANGER BAY FANS

My family enjoys the weekly series Danger Bay. My daughters really like all the marine mammals seen on the show. It reminds them of a summer visit to Sea World in Ohio.

I'm also writing to ask a question about Donnelly Rhodes who plays "Doc" Roberts. I would like to know if he was ever on the soap opera The Young and the Restless. Did he play a character named "Philip Chancellor?"

Kathy Applegate
Sharpsville, PA

Yes, Donnelly Rhodes did indeed portray "Philip Chancellor" in The Young and the Restless.

KUDOS FOR GEORGE PAL

Thank you so much for The Fantasy Film Worlds of George Pal. It was a wonderful documentary, and really something different! Keep up such good, innovative programming!

DOT AND THE WHALE

One of the first programs my family watched as new subscribers to The Disney Channel was Dot and the Whale. We found its mixture of live footage and animation fascinating, and the music was moving.

Our five year old, Lauren, was enthralled by the film, which sparked her interest in whales and their well-being. She has even "adopted" a real humpback whale through our local Whale Adoption Project and has spread her enthusiasm to her kindergarten class.

How wonderful it is to see The Disney Channel using television to inspire young minds with programs, such as Dot and the Whale, which entertain as well as raise people's consciousness in a low-key manner.

Anne Beaudoin
Worcester, MA

Dot and the Whale was created by the Australian filmmaker Yoram Gross. Another of Gross' films, The Camel Boy, premieres on The Disney Channel on March 22. Like Dot and the Whale, The Camel Boy is a fascinating blend of delightful animation and live-action footage. Set in Australia, it's an inspiring and moving film for young people.

SNOW WHITE

I've had The Disney Channel since it first began. I would like to know why we have never seen Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs in its entirety? We only get a scene now and then. I am well aware that you show many classics, but I am interested in knowing about this film.

Teresa Langman
Mililani Town, HI

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs has been shown in its entirety only in movie theaters. This year, in honor of its 50th anniversary, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs will be released in over 2000 theaters around the world, beginning July 17. For some interesting facts on the very first feature-length animated film, see "Exploring the Archives."

Sometimes it takes a real smarty cat to teach a child to read.

Sure, we admit that the Cat in the Hat can be a know-it-all. And he has a tendency to break all the rules.

His silly antics set the stage for one of the most serious and effective ways to help your child read. Children love him and all his friends. Because the special kind of fun and humor created by Dr. Seuss mirrors their minds with rhymes and repetition.

So reading isn't a chore, it's an adventure. An adventure that starts as you and your child read aloud the stories at bedtime. And before you know it, as if by magic, your child proudly announces, "I can read it all by myself."

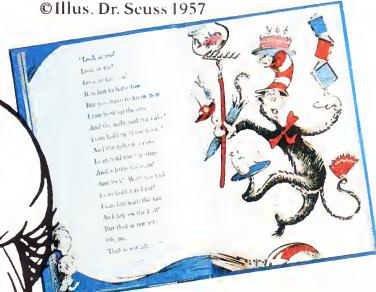

Join our Club for future scholars. And you'll also save lots of dollars. Dr. Seuss & His Friends, The Beginning Readers' Program, is a remarkable collection of beautifully illustrated books written or recommended by Dr. Seuss, the renowned Pulitzer Prize winner. Now, for a fraction of what you'd pay at the bookstore, you can get not only The Cat in the Hat, but also Green Eggs and Ham, Dr. Seuss's ABC and Bears on Wheels. Four books in all at a savings of more than $19. Plus, your child will get our Cat in the Hat bookrack worth $3.50, absolutely free. This colorful bookrack measures 11½" x 6¼" x 6½" and holds up to 15 books.

Send no money but don't delay. Mail the order form today. If, when you receive your books, you're not completely delighted, simply send them back. And keep the bookrack as our gift. You owe nothing. But if you do decide to keep the books and join the Club, we'll send you two new books every four weeks. And you're never obliged to accept a book unless you really want to. In any case, the bookrack is your free gift. A gift that will hold the books that just might help your child become a gifted child.

Get 4 books for just $1.95*, and The Cat In The Hat bookrack free.

I am enclosing no money. Please accept my child's enrollment and send the 4 books, The Cat in the Hat, Green Eggs and Ham, Dr. Seuss's ABC and Bears on Wheels, plus the Cat in the Hat Bookrack (a $3.50 value) as a free gift. The comparable retail value of the books alone is $23.80, but you will bill me for only $1.95, plus shipping and handling. I may examine the books free for 10 days, and if not completely delighted, return them at your expense and owe nothing. The free bookrack is mine to keep. If I choose to keep the 4 introductory books, my child will then receive 2 new Beginner Books every 4 weeks on 10-day approval, at the special member's price of only $4.49 each plus shipping and handling. Sales tax is extra where applicable. I may cancel at any time simply by following the instructions on the invoice accompanying my shipment, and return any book in the program at your expense.

Disney BEAT

A young Jodie Foster co-stars with Barbara Harris in the television premiere of the wacky Disney comedy Freaky Friday. Currently, Foster is resuming her film career after completing undergraduate studies at Yale University. She will star in the upcoming Five Corners. The movie centers on the relationships between Foster and three other teenagers.

Five Corners portrays the changes occurring in American society at the beginning of the 1960s.

John Forsythe hosts Disney's Academy Award Winners on The Channel in March. Forsythe, of course, is known to millions as Blake Carrington on the ABC series Dynasty. But while Forsythe admits that it's nice to be considered a romantic leading man, he acknowledges that the role can sometimes be too restricting: "A TV persona is so strong that anyone who gravitates against its image is running a great risk."

Sean Connery and Charles Martin Smith both achieved major successes in two different Disney films. Connery (pre-James Bond) in Darby O'Gill and the Little People and Smith in Never Cry Wolf (both of which are airing on The Disney Channel). The two actors will soon be appearing together in supporting roles in the movie version of the classic television series The Untouchables. Due in theaters this spring, the film stars Kevin Costner (Silverado) as crime buster Elliot Ness. Connery plays Ness' trusted assistant, and Smith is a U.S. Treasury accountant. All are intent on putting Al Capone behind bars—and Capone is played by Robert De Niro in a special cameo.

Subscribers can catch a young Anne Bancroft on The Disney Channel in the 1953 film The Kid from Left Field. Over the course of her distinguished career the actress has won two Tony awards, one of which was for her inspired Broadway performance in The Miracle Worker. (She also won an Oscar for the movie version of the play.) Bancroft's most recent performance was in Night Mother, the story of the intense relationship between a domineering mother, called Mama, and her suicidal daughter. It's likely to bring Bancroft yet another Oscar nomination. However she wasn't originally interested in playing the role of Mama.

Jessica Lange

"If anybody had approached me about this, I would have told them, 'Oh no, that's terrible miscasting. I could never play that role.' It was only when I read it (the script) that I knew I could play Mama."

John Forsythe

Cinema buffs will recall that Julie Harris received an Oscar nomination for her screen debut in The Member of the Wedding. However she also became a Broadway star in Carson McCuller's play on which the film was based. The versatile Harris has performed on stage, on screen, and on television (Knots Landing). Of late she's won acclaim for her one-woman shows featuring famous female writers. She portrayed poet Emily Dickinson in The Belle of Amherst, all three of the Bronte sisters in The Brontes (broadcast on PBS), and Leo Tolstoy's wife in The Countess.

Sean Connery

Another star of one-man shows is noted character actor James Whitmore. Among his credits are Give 'em Hell, Harry (he portrayed Harry Truman) and Bully! (Theodore Roosevelt), on The Disney Channel. Whitmore also provides the voice for Mark Twain in Will Vinton's Claymation film The Adventures of Mark Twain. His latest project is the feature film Nuts, starring Barbra Streisand, to be released next Christmas.

Jessica Lange and Sam Shepard, stars of Country, appeared on the silver screen together in Bruce Beresford's Crimes of the Heart, which also co-starred Sissy Spacek and Diane Keaton. With all that star power, Hollywood wags had predicted a massive battle of the egos. Such was not the case, and Lange attributes that to director Beresford: "The director sets the tone," she explains. "If you're working with a madman, he makes everybody uncomfortable."

Christopher Plummer appears on The Disney Channel in Stage Struck. Plummer, an accomplished thespian, will play an ambitious priest in another movie version of a famed TV series: Dragnet, which stars Dan Aykroyd as Joe Friday.

Knight without Armour stars an alluring Marlene Dietrich as a widowed countess in this '37 classic produced by Alexander Korda. Dietrich is the subject of actor/director Maximilian Schell's (The Black Hole, Peter the Great) recent documentary Marlene. Schell interviewed the reclusive actress (she turned 85 this past December) for a total of 12 hours. He was allowed to use her voice, but not her face. The film, voted best documentary of 1986 by the New York Film Critic's Circle, features many film clips of La Dietrich, the classic femme fatale of the silver screen. Ernest Hemingway once wrote that if Dietrich had never had more than her voice, she could still break your heart with it.

This year the entire Disney organization is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the theatrical release of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. And so is the rest of the world. The fabled young lady—"the fairest of them all"—appeared on the cover of the January 5 issue of People magazine as one of the anticipated highlights of 1987.

In the history of motion pictures, many films have reached their 50th anniversary, but none is as fresh and as popular, so many years after its creation, as Snow White. Each time it has been reissued, adults, with childhood memories of the movie's joy and magic, have taken their own children and grandchildren to see the film. And so the most notable event of the 1987 festivities will be the re-release of the ever-popular film, on July 17, in 2000 theaters in North America and in theaters in more than 40 countries all over the world, including the Soviet Union and China.

The Disney Channel is proud to join in the salute to Snow White's 50th anniversary. For this column I've collected interesting facts about the landmark film's most notable achievements. In the next few issues of The Disney Channel Magazine we'll continue to bring you news and information about Snow White.

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs:*
The First Full-Length Animated Feature Film

- Production on the film began in 1934, when Walt Disney called his animators together on a sound stage one evening and proceeded to tell them the entire story, acting out all of the parts. Later, every time the animators were baffled by a bit of action in the story and needed guidance, they recalled Walt's virtuoso performance.
- Walt had decided to use the Grimm fairy tale of Snow White for his first feature because he fondly recalled his first childhood movie-going experience, a silent version of Snow White starring Marguerite Clark.
- Actual animation on Snow White did not begin until 1936, although story work had been in process for two years.
- Animation had made enormous strides between the debut of Mickey Mouse in 1928 and that of Snow White in 1937. Walt Disney's animators had spent these nine years learning their trade not only on the Mickey Mouse series but also on the Silly Symphonies, where they experimented with and perfected the techniques later used with such brilliance in Snow White.
- Walt Disney had a difficult time obtaining financing for his film. Finally forced to show the incomplete film to his banker, Walt sat horrified as the banker watched stone-faced throughout the screening. But, on the way to his car, the banker turned to Walt and said, "Walt, that film is going to make you a hatful of money."

Theatrical Release

- The film premiered at the Carthay Circle Theater in Hollywood on December 21, 1937.

- The final cost of the film: $1,488,000.
- It made $8,500,000 during its first release. This is all the more amazing when one realizes that children in 1937 were paying a dime to get into a theater.
- Snow White was reissued in 1944, 1952, 1958, 1967, 1975, and 1983. The special 50th anniversary release is its seventh reissue.
- Snow White became the highest-grossing motion picture of all time—a record it held until it was surpassed by Gone With the Wind.

Production Notes

- Hundreds of Disney artists worked on the film, including 32 animators, 102 assistants, 107 inbetweeners (who fill in bits of action between the animators' drawings), 20 layout men, 25 background artists, 65 special effects animators, and 158 inkers and painters.
- It is estimated that at least one million drawings were made during the production of the film.

• It took months of research by studio chemists and the mixing of 1500 paint colors and shades to determine the final hues to be used for painting characters and backgrounds for the Technicolor film.

Casting

- The live model for the character of Snow White was Marge Belcher, who later became Marge Champion of the well-known Marge and Gower Champion dance team.
- After auditioning more than 150 girls, to provide Snow White's voice, Walt Disney selected Adriana Caselotti, the daughter of a Los Angeles vocal coach.
- Harry Stockwell (father of actors Dean and Guy Stockwell) served as a live-action model and provided the voice of the Prince. Pinto Colvig, known for being the voice of Goofy, did the voices of Sleepy and Grumpy, while Billy Gilbert, known for his comedic sneezes, was a natural for Sneezy.

A PRAIRIE HOME COMPANION

Garrison Keillor,
America's foremost humorist, brings his hit radio show to TV as an exclusive series on The Disney Channel.

What are over four million Americans doing huddled around their radios in this, The Age of Television? They're listening to unique musical performers, comedy sketches, and homespun tales about Lake Wobegon, Minnesota, tales told by Garrison Keillor, the creator, host and chief writer of Minnesota Public Radio's hit variety program A Prairie Home Companion. Now Keillor's about to set out in a new direction, and subscribers of The Disney Channel can experience it when A Prairie Home Companion comes to The Channel as an exclusive weekly series, premiering Saturday, March 7 at 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time).

Critics have acclaimed A Prairie Home Companion as a superb form of entertainment, comparing it to the classic radio variety shows of the past. That comparison isn't surprising. Keillor's inspiration came out of a nonfiction article he was assigned to write on The Grand Ole Opry in 1974. Writing the piece, Keillor, whose humorous fiction has been published in both The New Yorker and The Atlantic Monthly magazines, was struck by the notion of creating a new radio show with its roots in the American heartland—and immediately envisioned performing in it.

"I had a problem that is common to writers," Keillor explains, "and that was stupor. You can sit in an empty room and look at blank paper for only so long. Other writers take up carpentry or gardening or golf. I took up this show as my recreation."

Critics have hailed Garrison Keillor as a humorist and storyteller in the vein of James Thurber, S.J. Perelman, and the genre's great progenitor, Mark Twain. Each Saturday, Keillor introduces A Prairie Home Companion. What follows is a mix of eclectic music, wacky parodies of commercials, and a monologue that recounts the news from Lake Wobegon, Keillor's fictional hamlet.

Keillor's stories center around recognizable people. Sometimes the tales bring smiles to the faces of an audience, sometimes the tales possess a sad and melancholy light. Yet regardless of their tone, they call to life an American past that many remember and most still yearn for.

"I figured if I was going to do anything well on the show it would probably be comedy," Keillor says now. "I figured that comedy is a form of writing, so I would stand a chance. Over the first couple of years, failure at stand-up comedy drove me to storytelling. I started out telling true stories from my childhood, dressed up as fiction, and then discovered Lake Wobegon as a place to set them."

The result of Keillor's storytelling talents has been to turn A Prairie Home Companion into a contemporary classic. Keillor's published account of the small village located in Mist County, Minnesota, Lake Wobegon Days, was a bestseller. Now A Prairie Home Companion extends its range to television with its weekly appearance on The Disney Channel.

This important series has been made possible by funding from major U.S. corporations. It is the first of a few new series that will be introduced in the coming months that have been created and produced with the financial aid of concerned companies. The goal is to bring Disney Channel subscribers a continuous flow of fresh top quality entertainment that could not be presented otherwise.

A Prairie Home Companion promises to be a major television event in 1987. THE JETS

Following in the footsteps of the Osmonds and the Jacksons, and talented group. Theirs is the best kind of both to their music and to

On stage The Jets—eight brothers and sisters—sparkle with talent and energy. Off stage they still sparkle—with friendliness and enthusiasm. The Jets in Hawaii, a Disney Channel musical special on April 7 at 8:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time), brings you this warm wonderful family in both settings: on stage in sunny Hawaii and at home with their six younger siblings and parents in chilly Minneapolis.

The Disney Channel Magazine visited with The Jets when they performed at Disneyland between Christmas and New Year, the final performances of a year-long tour across the country. That tour put them on the map in more ways than driving their family van. During that time their first album—The Jets—reached No. 29 on Billboard's Top Pop chart, and produced four successful singles, the most popular being "Crush on You," which soared to No. 3 on Billboard's chart. In every state, audiences of people all ages loved them.

And at the end of a year of tightly scheduled performances in 45 states, they looked as fresh as though they were starting out.

Their spirits were buoyant as they gathered around, sitting close to each other, joking and giggling, each one eager to join in the telling of the story they love to tell: of the family's journey from poverty and obscurity to the bright lights of the stage. It doesn't matter which one is telling it; they speak as The Jets. And it is a fascinating tale, indeed, which is currently in development as a feature film possibility.

Their parents Mike and Vake Wolfgramm came to the United States from Tonga (a Polynesian island in the South Pacific) in

"We learned how to play pop music by listening to the radio. We never had enough money for lessons."

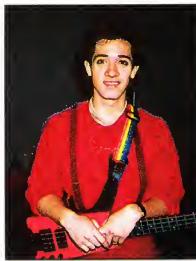

1965 and settled in Salt Lake City. There Mike worked in a grocery store and did lawn work to support his family, which grew steadily. The children brought in some extra money by helping with the lawn work and performing as Polynesian dancers (along with their mother, who is a professional hula dancer).

Their father bought a few musical instruments for them to play popular music. "But at first they sat in the living room. No one knew how to play them," LeRoy (21), the oldest son, confessed. "We learned by listening to the radio. We never had enough money for lessons."

In 1978, as the story goes, they had a family meeting to decide what their family goal would be. "Dad wanted something we could do as a family," LeRoy continues, although it's not only LeRoy speaking; all eight of them chime in. "Dad wanted a goal we could strive for together. And we chose the entertainment business over lawn work." They all laugh.

Their Dad quit his job, and they traveled around in an unheated van, with lawn chairs in the back. The kids tell of the baloney sandwiches and water they lived on, and the icicles inside the van, as they toured, performing their Polynesian revue at festivals and fairs and Hawaiian hotels in the eight brothers and sisters known as The Jets are a tight-knit American success story: one of hard work and dedication, their life together as a family.

the Midwest and Canada.

All the while they were traveling, they were practicing pop music on the side. Eventually they started performing a half hour of pop at the end of the Polynesian show. They learned to play any kind of music. "If old people came in, we played a polka. If a cowboy came in, we'd do country and western. Pop. Soul. Anything," they all agreed, laughing and reminiscing about those early days.

In 1982 they arrived at a hotel in Minneapolis, part of a chain of hotels where they were supposed to perform for many weeks. The hotel chain had gone bankrupt, however, and the Wolfgramms—broke—were stuck in Minneapolis to find whatever work they could.

Such a story inevitably has a happy ending, and theirs has to do with finding a manager—Don Powell—when stranded in an unfamiliar city. Years before, Powell had managed such talent as Stevie Wonder and David Bowie, but he was currently running his family's car dealership in Minneapolis. The Wolfgramms kept urging him to come see their act, and according to them, he finally couldn't say no again. He had no intention of getting back into the pop music business. But when he saw them, he changed his mind.

Every Monday night they have family meetings, where they talk about their problems and read motivational stories to keep their spirits up.

A demo tape of four songs led to a contract with MCA, a new house in Minneapolis, a new van, and a busy recording and touring schedule. But family is still the most important thing to The Jets, and they all agree that they work as hard on family communication as they do on their music.

Every Monday night they have family meetings, where they talk about everything. They read inspirational and motivational stories to keep their spirits up—stories from scripture or biographies of successful people, such as Elvis Presley, Bill Marriott or Walt Disney. They air any grudges, ranging from serious jealousies to small annoyances, such as someone not returning a comb. They fight, they argue, and then come to an agreement so that they can continue to perform, free of bad feelings. They see these meetings as invaluable to their working and living together.

They use the meetings to improve themselves. They discuss manners, behavior, do's, don'ts, and why's. Their parents, who are typically in the background while The Jets tour, are very much in the foreground for the Monday night meetings. They preside over the meetings, but the kids say there's a spirit of openness, that they feel they can share anything with their parents.

They see their family as a role model for other families. At the end of our time together, LeRoy emphasized that point: "Kids don't have to be embarrassed to be seen with their sisters or brothers. We work hard to stay together. We want families to know that they can do things together."

THE FEISTY AND DREAMY Anne Shirley

In Anne of Green Gables, she was a precocious little red-head who preferred dreams to reality. In Anne of Avonlea, when Anne's 10 years older, reality puts her romantic ideals to the test.

"Older couple apply to orphan asylum for a boy. By mistake, a girl is sent them." With this spare journal entry writer Lucy Maud Montgomery sparked the glowing tale Anne of Green Gables, about young Anne Shirley. Anne's charm and innocent passion for life endear her to adoptive parents Matthew and Marilla Cuthbert in spite of the girl's dreamily romantic notions and an uncanny talent for getting into mischief. The book's instant success spurred the author to write seven more books, constituting a popular series that has retained its freshness and universal appeal.

The Disney Channel has just completed production of Anne of Avonlea: The Continuing Story of Anne of Green Gables, a four-hour sequel to the Emmy Award-winning mini-series, Anne of Green Gables. The two four-hour mini-series will be shown sequentially on The Disney Channel, starting with Anne of Green Gables, on Saturday, April 11 at 7:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). Both mini-series star Megan Follows as Anne and Colleen Dewhurst as her formidable but sympathetic foster mother.

Anne Shirley has had a powerful influence on people ever since Anne of Green Gables was published in 1908. Within the next five years, the book went through 32 editions. Mark Twain hailed Anne as "the dearest and most lovable child in fiction since the immortal Alice."

Today the book is available in at least 15 languages, including Turkish, Icelandic and Korean. In Japan the character of Anne Shirley has had a large following for years. At least two clubs devoted to Anne and writer Montgomery thrive throughout the country and this year upwards of 10,000 Japanese are expected to visit Prince Edward Island to retrace the footsteps of their favorite author. The book, translated as "Red-Haired Anne," is used to teach English, and "Anne" themes abound in everything from toys to television commercials.

In Poland Anne's continual conflict with authoritarian adults is interpreted as a symbol of Poland's ongoing struggle with the Soviet Union. A stage adaptation of the orphan's saga premiered in Warsaw in 1958 and after more than 5,000 performances is still going strong.

Ironically, author Montgomery expressed surprise at the amazing popularity of her creation. Yet her own story, recently revealed in the publication of her private journals, may provide the best explanation of Anne's success. Montgomery was the product of a stoic Scots-Presbyterian upbringing which ruled that emotions must always be controlled and children must not be spoiled by adult shows of affection.

Montgomery fashioned in her writing the happy childhood she never had. She endowed her young heroine with the ability to find and draw out the love in those around her. At the same time, Anne also indulges her own free spirit. For generations, reading audiences have found Anne irresistible. Now with this magnificent TV production, The Disney Channel viewing audience, too, will find it hard to resist the red-headed, high-spirited orphan.

Disney Channel DISCOVERY

Henry Thomas is Cody Walpole, an American living in Australia. Below: Cody, Gaza, his guardian, and Cody's sweetheart Wendy.

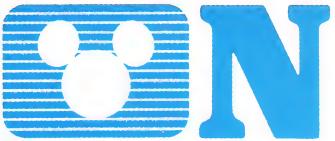

THE QUEST

Henry Thomas (who also starred in Steven Spielberg's E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial), portrays 14-year-old Cody Walpole in this exciting Disney Channel Discovery, which premieres March 28 at 7:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific time). An American orphaned in Australia, Cody lives with his kindly guardian, Gaza. Cody's a high-spirited lad with a talent for mechanical invention that sometimes lands him in trouble.

One day, Cody, his sweetheart Wendy, and her precocious sister Jane go out for a picnic in the countryside. They soon wander into a strange area that Cody realizes is a "frog dreaming"—a mystical place of power that was taboo to the Australian Aborigines. There they discover a strange pond, a pond that seems to hold a wild and terrifying creature, a Loch Ness-type monster, in its depths.

Cody seeks an answer to the riddle of the pond from the Aborigine, Charlie Pride, who tells him it's the home of Donkegin, a monster that eats rock. Despite opposition from his guardian, Cody devises a daring plan to plumb the waters of Donkegin pond in this taut and atmospheric thriller.

FOR PLUTO

I like Pluto because he's never blue He's happy and cheerful and a little crazy too.
But if you stop and think I'm sure

This issue the two stars of Danger Bay, Ocean Hellman and Christopher Crabb, review their favorite books. While their reviews are of books for older readers, "The Magic of Reading" welcomes book reviews from all of our readers! If you'd like to review your favorite book for The Disney Channel, send your review to "Book Review," The Disney Channel Magazine, P.O. Box 6439, Burbank, CA 91510-6439. CLAN OF THE CAVE BEAR

by Jean M. Auel

Reviewed by Ocean Hellman

Since I love to read, I have many favorite books. However, Clan of the Cave Bear and the other two books in the series The Valley of Horses and The Mammoth Hunters are wonderful.

Jean M. Auel is a great storyteller and her imagery of this fascinating era is beautiful. The main character "Ayla" is a very strong character and role model although she is very vulnerable. The book concentrates on her struggle with growing up in a very primitive society.

TO KILL A MOCKINGBIRD

by Harper Lee

Reviewed by
Christopher Crabb

This book has great character development and I felt that after reading it, I wished I could actually meet the characters!

The book gave me insight into the racial problems of the South. The trial is full of suspense and the characters are wonderful, especially Scout. This book is a must read for people of all ages.

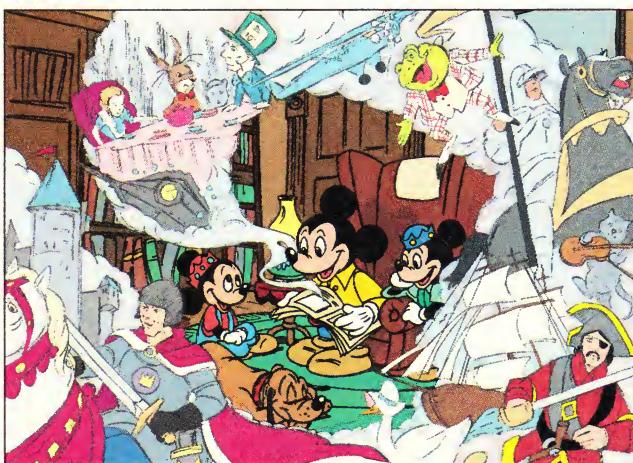

THE POET'S CORNER

We received our first poem in response to "The Poet's Corner" just as we were going to press.

WRITE YOUR OWN COMIC

FIND IT IN THE LIBRARY

Seven fine films playing on The Disney Channel are based on books. Mary Rodgers, who wrote A Billion for Boris, is also the author of the book Freaky Friday, on which the Disney Comedy is based. Jules Verne, the legendary 19th century science fiction author, has movie versions of two of his books playing on The Channel. The first is Disney's classic adventure with Hayley Mills, In Search of the Castaways (based on Verne's novel Captain Grant's Children). The second is From the Earth to the Moon. Never Cry Wolf, the haunting story of a man studying wolves on the tundra, was adapted from a book by Canadian writer Farley Mowat. The Disney Channel is showing a film version of The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, written by the great American novelist and humorist Mark Twain. And finally, the feature version of our series The Wind in the Willows, starring Kenneth Grahame's beloved gentlemen-animals, also returns to The Disney Channel.

Read, Write, and Draw

Here is another beginning to a story for you to finish and to illustrate in any way you wish. There is no right or wrong, only a brand new story—all your own. It can be happy, sad, scary or funny. It can be short or long in length (but not more than 100 words). Please send your illustrated story to the following address:

SNEAKERS

Since the summer Rick had wanted a pair of high white sneakers, the kind that go up to the ankles, the kind basketball players wear.

Finally his mother bought him a pair, and he loved them. Then it was winter vacation, and when he went back to school, Rick saw that some of his friends were wearing new, high black sneakers.

“Mom,” Rick asked, “do you think I could get a new pair of sneakers—black ones?”

“I already bought you a new pair of sneakers this year,” his mother replied.

“I know,” said Rick, “but all the kids are wearing them.”

“But, Mom . . .” said Rick.

“Rick, dear,” his mother said, “you’ll have to find a way to settle this yourself.”

This activity is open to children 12 years and under. All submissions become the property of The Disney Channel and cannot be individually acknowledged or returned.

Martika OF KIDS INCORPORATED

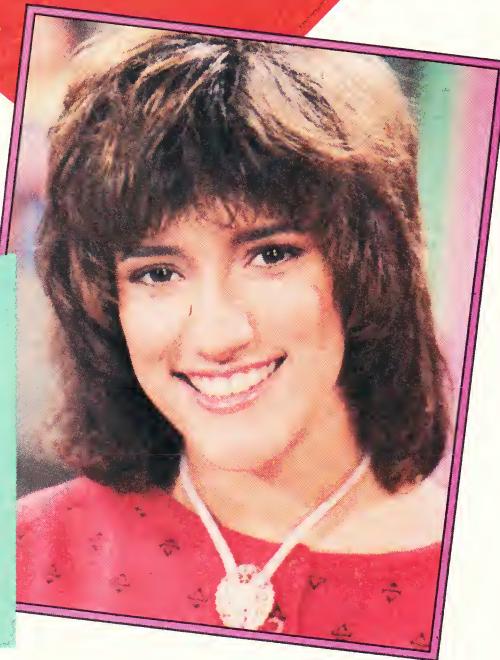

Martika's favorites:

Favorite color: White

Favorite food: "I like chiliburgers, but my official choice is probably pizza. And anything my Mom makes is great."

Favorite singers: George Michael and Whitney Houston

Favorite all-around performer: Madonna—"I love her because she's so artistic."

Martika in Spanish means little Marta. "My family is from Cuba," Martika explains. Her real name is Marta Marrero.

"If I were going to be an actress, Marta Marrero might be okay, but I want to be a rock star, so Martika is better. It's to the point, like Prince, Cher, Madonna."

"Martika was my nickname when I was little, but when I started school, I didn't want anybody to call me that because it was babyish. Now I like it."

Martika, one of the original members of Kids Incorporated, is the oldest in the group. "I'm like their big sister," Martika says of the other kids. "Ryan is like my friend, but the others are my babies. They look up to me."

"They're great kids, too," adds Martika. "To be so talented and to have a TV show, they could be snobby about it all, but they're not. We're like a family."

Martika has always wanted to be a star. When she was three years old, she wanted to be a ballerina. At 11 or 12 she switched to singing and acting. "I have always been running off to lessons," she explains. "I wasn't the kind of kid who played in the streets."

"Also I wasn't very popular in school, because I didn't go along with the crowd. Whatever the boys said, the girls agreed with. I couldn't do that. It made me angry that they'd just agree with the boys to be popular. I have a lot of friends now, and I guess I'm cool, but I wasn't then."

"I also didn't really like sports. I'd rather read a book. I like series books. After I read a book I know the characters. I feel empty when I've finished reading about them. With a series, you can keep on going."

When I was a child, my favorite books were the Narnia series by C.S. Lewis."

Martika is very close to her family. "My Mom is my best friend," she says. She has three older brothers, ages 22, 25, and 28. "My parents always wanted a girl." Being the youngest and the only girl, Martika describes as "sometimes awful and sometimes great."

Martika likes to go to concerts, go dancing, and go to parties. "But most of the time I like to stay home, rent movies, order out for a pizza and a large bottle of Pepsi. Parties are fun, but they get real boring. I'm really pretty much of a homebody. I love my home."

Martika has a definite plan for becoming a star. She takes lessons: singing and acting. She'd like to do a sitcom. ("That would be great. It's great exposure.") But her ultimate goal is to sing—and perform live. She plays the piano and sometimes percussion, but really "my voice is my main instrument." ♦

THE ADVENTURES OF MARK TWAIN

Told through the magic of Will Vinton's Claymation process, this superb film is a fantasy account of Mark Twain's last journey. As Halley's Comet speeds towards Earth (as it did at his birth 75 years earlier), Twain prepares for a cosmic voyage to the comet in a space-craft. Joining the celebrated author and humorist on his trip to the stars are his three greatest characters: Tom Sawyer, Becky Thatcher, and Huck Finn. (1:29) Mar. 21, 25, 29; Apr. 2, 6, 11

This bubbling musical was the film which introduced the "Brazilian bombshell" Carmen Miranda to the movies. Don Ameche portrays a wealthy Argentinian horsebreeder and Betty Grable is a young American girl who meets him. It's love, romance, and marriage for the pair, but not before they engage in lovers' quarrels and a tour of Argentina, complete with musical productions. March 21; April 2, 6

THE WESTERNER

Gary Cooper is the hero and Walter Brennan is the Hangin' Judge Roy Bean who loves "The Jersey Lily," Lily Langtry, in this classic western. (1:40) Mar. 3, 15, 30

An exquisite collection of eight hand-painted bronze sculptures...

This was Walt Disney's first full-length feature — a fabulous cinematic breakthrough and a major work that was destined to endure as one of the greatest animated classics of all time. Even today, audiences of all ages are captivated by this enchanting film, by the beauty and charm of Snow White and by the antics of those seven adorable dwarfs.

And now, for the first time, The Disney Collection is proud to present the OFFICIAL 50TH ANNIVERSARY EDITION OF DISNEY'S SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS — eight bronze sculptured figurines re-creating the film's original characters. Unmistakably Disney Working from actual "stills" from Disney's Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, numerous sketches were made before final full-color illustrations were approved by The Walt Disney Company. No detail was overlooked. Notice the authentic movie costume and the life-like expression of each memorable character.

Indeed, with this OFFICIAL 50TH ANNIVERSARY EDITION on display in your home, you will relive the magic and joy of Disney's Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs over and over again!

Meticulous sculpturing in bronze

Each figurine in this collection was meticulously crafted by Robert Olszewski, the master artist at Goebel Miniatures. Using the original Disney art, Mr. Olszewski created intricate wax sculptures to capture the precious detail of each character. Next came plaster molds and master molds made from molten silver. Only then, and under the watchful eye of the artist, was each figurine cast in bronze. Disney art and Goebel quality — this is the combination that sets apart these figurines from any others, available anywhere!

Individually painted by hand

In keeping with Goebel's commitment to absolute perfection, each figurine is individually painted by hand, a procedure that involves no less than 50 steps. Each figurine is rich in color, reflecting the radiant charm of Snow White and the distinctive facial features of the Seven Dwarfs. Moreover, each sculpted figurine is finished with a brilliant glaze.

THE CAMEL BOY

This exciting full-length animated children's adventure film is from Yoram Gross, who brought you the "Dot" films. And like those films, it features live-action backgrounds. The burning sands of Australia's inland deserts provide the setting for this story about the friendship between an Arabian boy and a camel. In 1920, young Ali and his grandfather set sail with their camels from Arabia for an expedition to find the shortest route across the Great Victoria desert in Australia. Heat, lack of water and a series of accidents eventually force the explorers back. Ali reluctantly sets his favorite camel free and sadly returns to his own country. Years later, through coincidence and good fortune, the young Arabian finds he is in for a beautiful surprise. (1:15) Mar. 22, 25; Apr. 10

Reading FOR THE LOVE OF IT

This final installment of "Reading For the Love of It" focuses on preliteracy and children's picture books. Famed children's illustrator Leo Lionni looks at picture books from his own perspective as an artist, drawing for this very young audience. We've also included some tips for parents on how to choose picture books for these special little people.

The Disney Channel Magazine will continue The Family Reading Program within the "Disney Channel Families" column, periodically providing you with information, interesting thoughts, or tips. In addition, "Just for Kids" will include the Read, Write, and Draw activity, as well as additional reading-related activities, identified with the familiar Family Reading Program stamp.

—by Leo Lionni

I believe that the origins of all literacy lie far less in the traditional learning processes than in the child's feelings and fantasies. For it is these that set the style for all further developments of his symbolic life, the themes and nature of his interior monologues, the quality of his imagery. Throughout the rest of his life they will reemerge in every creative act and reflect and express all the basic facets of his identity.

It is the world around the child that for better or for worse must provide the ingredients that will direct his imagination and ultimately shape the style of his literacy. One of the most important of these ingredients is the picture book. For it is there that the child will have his first encounter with a structured fantasy, mirrored in his own imagination and animated by his own feelings and imagery. It is there that, through the mediation of an adult reader, he will discover the relationship between visual and verbal language.

Later, when he is alone and turns the pages over and over again, the illustrations will recall the remembered text. He will then utter his first conscious internal monologue. And with the memory of the reading voice that will color his silent words and pace their rhythm, he will have his first lesson in rhetoric. Unknowingly, he will learn about beginning and end, cause and effect, and sequence. And, most important of all, he will experience the discovery of a new kind of verbal world, so different in structure and style from the chaotic verbal traffic which has surrounded him until then. The picture book, in the midst of a complex, often repressive and incomprehensible environment, is for the child an imaginary island. Like the terrariums of my youth, it is an alternative world where, now that he can reenact the story, even his surprises are predictable.

The meaningless signs that accompany the pictures, from which adults can extract meaningful sounds, vaguely enter his consciousness. The child knows that the greater their number, the longer the sentences. They are probably descriptions of places or events. Very short sentences are outcries or questions. Are words that begin with larger letters names? Little by little, the scribbles appear to be related to the explicit meanings of the illustrations. Could he now, if the pictures were removed, even manage to read the story? Could the words, as yet illegible, trigger off the reappearance in his mind of the familiar images and the sequence of events? Probably, yes.

The child learns to read and write. His universe of islands is expanding and along with it the form and content of his inner soliloquy. He begins to discern shades of meaning, to choose words to attach to the realities that surround him, to name them and express feelings about them. "I have a silkworm. It is white and fat and round" will be his first composition. He begins to organize sequences. He is on the threshold of logic. And of poetry. Like the book, his mind is filled with pictures and words. But images and words are now inextricably mingled together. They will remain inseparable for the rest of his life. . . .

Jean de Brunhoff's illustration (right) is from his world-famous book The Story of Babar. An adaptation of the whimsical tale about the little elephant will air on The Disney Channel in April. Today Laurent de Brunhoff, Jean's son, is still producing new books about Babar, his family and friends.

These observations are but a hint as to what should be explored about picture books and their role in the development of visual and verbal literacy. To name but a few things: the relationship between words and images, the limitations and opportunities of this relationship, the function of words and images in stimulating the imagination and orienting interior discourse. But when all is said and done, the workings of man's mind, especially in their nebulous formative stages, and the birth of his symbolic universe will still be little more than a hypothesis. To expect more is rather like trying to jump over one's own shadow, a feat that only poets can be expected to perform.

What Parents Can Look For in a Picture Book

Splashy pictures and unusually large or small size are all too often the factors that persuade parents and grandparents to buy a particular children's picture book. But too much emphasis on these characteristics, along with hassle in choosing a book, may result in not making the best choice.

Is the text itself worth listening to?

Ethel Heins, former editor of The Horn Book Magazine, which publishes reviews and essays on children's books, says that first of all parents "must be willing to invest some time and some interest in picture books."

She suggests a parent go to the library and spend several hours going through books that have stood the test of time. "The children's librarian is the person who should know the basic picture books and be able to help the parent," Heins says.

On this initial trip to the library, parents should leave children at home. It's easier to browse, examine the card catalog, and talk with the librarian if little ones aren't underfoot.

While looking at picture books, Heins recommends a parent ask some of the following questions:

- Is the story line original and is it imaginatively executed?
- Do the text and the illustrations result in a whole?
- Is the text itself worth listening to?
- Are the illustrations appropriate for the story (e.g., if the story takes place in Colonial America, are the illustrations set in the same time period)?

- Do the illustrations go beyond the words, but also faithfully interpret the text (i.e., do the illustrations show the reader more than the text tells him, but also reflect the tone of the story)?

- Do the illustrations extend the emotion and action of the text (e.g., if the story is about the fast-paced life in the city, do the illustrations reflect the hustle and intensity of city life)?

By asking these questions, a parent should be able to begin to discriminate between the good books and the bad.

Many libraries have reading programs, and if you or your child is not quite ready for a structured reading agenda, the librarian should also have some book lists readily available.

Changing Places

Freaky Friday is a wacky Disney comedy about a mother and her rebellious daughter whose minds enter one another's bodies for the day. Annabel's mother learns that a simple day at school isn't so simple.

Mary Rodgers, author of the book Freaky Friday as well as the screenplay, says: "Everyone says childhood is so much fun. Not true! Kids face lots of problems. It's difficult to grow up."

Unlike Annabel and her mother, the rest of us don't have a magical mind-body transfer ability to assist our understanding. We must rely on empathy to understand our children's feelings. And it's not easy to be truly empathetic. Janis Lubin Minton, child development consultant to The Disney Channel,* offers a few suggestions for becoming more empathetic. She emphasizes that the best way to understand a child's feelings is to remember your own childhood feelings. Remember how you felt when you were angry, nervous, or scared.

"It's also a help to understand a child's time concept,"

The Andrews family together after a Freaky Friday.

The Disney comedy stars Barbara Harris and Jodie Foster as mother and daughter.

Minton adds. "Children sometimes think of a dreaded activity as going on forever. It's helpful to say something like, 'Just remember, it lasts only an hour and after that we'll have a good family dinner,' or whatever."

"Sometimes parents think that to empathize is to be too permissive," Minton continues. "Parents must still set limits, of course, and insist that children do certain things they don't want to, but acknowledging a child's feelings often enables him to then endure the dreaded task or experience.

"Stories about difficulties that parents had when they were children are helpful," says Minton. "Kids want to know the parts of parents' lives when they weren't so happy. Children want to see adults as whole people. And parents should try to see children as whole people as well."

That was the benefit to Annabel and her mother. After being Annabel for a day, her mother no longer saw her as a flaky kid. "She just wants to do her own thing," her mother says of Annabel.

Two other books about changing places, which are sure to entertain young readers, are Gabrielle and Selena, by Peter Desbarats, and Bea and Mr. Jones, by Amy Schwartz.

Gabrielle and Selena is about what happens when two girls from culturally different households switch places. They each think the other's house would be a better place to live, and their good-natured parents let them give it a try. The book's written for children about six years and up.

Bea and Mr. Jones is an enthralling tale for younger children. In this story, Bea doesn't like kindergarten, and her father is fed up working for an advertising agency. When they change places, it turns out that Bea has a ball running the ad agency, and Mr. Jones really loves kindergarten!

*Janis Lubin Minton is also on the staff of The Early Childhood Center, an affiliate of Cedars-Sinai Hospital in Los Angeles.

"And the Winners Are..."

Every January, publishers of children's books, children's librarians, and others with a special interest in children's literature eagerly await the American Library Association's announcement of the Newbery and Caldecott winners. This year's winners were Sid Fleischman, author of The Whipping Boy, and Richard Egielski, illustrator of Hey, Al.

Sid Fleischman, who won the Newbery Medal for the most distinguished contribution to American literature for children published in 1986, worked as a professional magician and a newspaperman before turning to fiction writing. Trevelyn Jones, Newbery award committee chair, said of Fleischman and The Whipping Boy: "He spins a rollicking yarn of cutthroat villains who get their comeuppance, a spoiled prince who learns to respect his subjects, and a resourceful hero whose common sense prevails."

"In Hey, Al, every aspect of the picture book as an art form is utilized to create an unforgettable partnership of pictures and words," said Kay Vandergrift, chair of the Caldecott committee. "Al, a janitor, and his dog, Eddie, trade their humdrum existence for life on an island paradise in the sky."

The story for Hey, Al is by Arthur Yorinks. Yorinks and Egielski met at Parsons School of Design in 1975, and have collaborated on several books, Sid and Sol; Louis the Fish; and It Happened in Pinsk.

Of course there are many beloved and wonderful books that don't receive awards. But these are two that are winners, and so henceforth they'll bear the familiar gold Newbery Medal and Caldecott Medal stickers on their front covers.

WILL VINTON'S STARS ARE MADE OF CLAY

Claymation is a performance with figures," explains Will Vinton, the producer and director of The Adventures of Mark Twain, the first feature film made in Claymation. "The animator sits in front of the camera and performs this blob of clay, much the way an actor acts, trying to communicate the characters' thoughts and feelings." The figures, however, are only inches tall.

Of course, creating a film in Claymation is a Herculean labor. Filming is done one frame at a time, with the figures moved ever so slightly between frames. In The Adventures of Mark Twain, the sculpted clay figures were changed 24 times per each second of film.

Still, that's a labor of love for Will Vinton. He's currently at work on yet another Claymation movie featuring an original story. "That's the only way to really explore the medium," he says. "I believe in Claymation, but like any other medium, it needs people to work in it and develop it in order for great things to come out of it."

HENRY THOMAS' AUSTRALIAN ADVENTURE

I had a good time in Australia," remarks Henry Thomas, the 15-year-old American star of The Quest, an Australian-made Disney Channel Discovery which premieres March 28. (A young Henry Thomas appeared in Steven Spielberg's mega-hit E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial.) "Australia was like no place I'd ever been."

Location shooting took place 40 minutes outside of Melbourne. "Melbourne's a great big city," Thomas explains, "but the feeling you get is of a small town. I liked riding the trams and the streetcars."

Of course shooting a movie isn't all fun. It's a lot of hard work, too. The menacing "pond" in the film, home of a legendary Aborigine monster, provided Henry Thomas with some trying days.

"I did have to swim in it for a couple of scenes," he explains. "The pond was really an abandoned old quarry. The water was cold and real murky. I had a wet suit on under my clothes. It's really hard to swim when you're wearing clothes and shoes."

Filming The Quest's underwater sequences was a little easier. "That was a really neat effect. It was shot in a pool that was 30 feet long, 15 feet wide. I was really on my knees, with a compressor blowing air to me."

Since The Quest, Thomas has been "taking it easy." He's currently a freshman in high school. "I still read scripts," he says, "but I haven't seen one yet that strikes me. I'd like a change from the stereotype."

At the moment the former star of E.T. is content being a normal kid. These days, instead of learning his lines, Henry Thomas is wrestling with his least favorite subject as a high-school student: algebra.

CIRCUS: Behind the Scenes of "The Greatest Show On Earth"

With Circus, an exclusive feature film made for The Disney Channel, subscribers can take a behind-the-scenes look at The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, beginning March 29. It's a fit counterpart to Disneyland's "Circus Fantasy 1987," which is performing at The Magic Kingdom from March 7 to April 26. It, too, features "The Greatest Show On Earth."

Circus looks at the actual creation of the 113th edition of The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus. Over four weeks at the Circus' winter headquarters, 400 people from performers to stagehands to costume designers labor to create its multi-million dollar traveling production.

The same level of intensity that marks Circus is also to be found in Disneyland's "Circus Fantasy 1987." But the venue for "Circus Fantasy" is The Magic Kingdom itself.

The entertainment ranges from Main Street, the scene of a daily classic "Circus on Parade," to Videopolis, where the "Circus Fantasy Stage Show" features singers, dancers and live animals in a "Circus Love Story." There's also the unforgettable "Wheel of Destiny" and the "Astro Sky Cycle."

All the world loves the circus, and now Disneyland visitors can see star acts from "The Greatest Show on Earth." It's a perfect complement to The Disney Channel's exciting film, Circus.
